“I opted to use color film for my portfolio project. Having the darkroom easily accessible helped me create my artistic voice in the medium.”

FACILITIES FOR creativity

"I LIKE WHAT YOU DID with the texture of the paper; the shadows are really interesting." "Wow, she looks like she's glowing!" At the end of each unit in Scott Nobles' photography classes, students critique one another's work, learning important lessons in giving and receiving feedback.

In the last two years, the visual arts department's photography courses have seen an increase in participation. Thanks to a new darkroom, light studio, and updated digital imaging lab, students can express their creativity in more ways than ever. Students learn both digital and analog photography in the introductory courses and add to their skill set as they progress into advanced courses.

Scott shares, "My role as an educator is to open the doors to possibilities. Having new facilities and tools allows students to go down whatever path they see fit to be creative."

MILTON ACADEMY'S VISION for the future includes physical spaces that match the excellence of our curriculum. Updating our facilities is also an important part of Dare: The Campaign for Milton, ensuring that our facilities support meaningful interactions among students and faculty.

The new photography darkroom in the Arts and Media Center is one of the many ongoing facilities improvements that reflect Dare's mission. Your gift to the Milton Fund provides students with the facilities and resources to explore their creativity, examine different perspectives, and build connections between different subjects.

Please renew your support of the Milton Fund today in honor of your reunion and invest in Milton's vision for our campus.
